

JOHN L. THE HERO OF A NOVEL.

He Stopped Drinking and Boosted Mr. Depew Into the Presidency.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 9.—John L. Sullivan has been made the hero of an optimistic novel. The book is a Louisiana newspaper man and pictures Sullivan as having stopped drinking.

With this improbability as a basis, the author proceeds to elect him to Congress, where he gets bills passed appropriating $100,000,000 for the relief of the farmers, making instruction in agriculture, brands of the War Department, &c. He is also appointed President, but is shot while making a fight against syndicates and trusts on the floor of the House of Representatives, and an effort is about to be established which will have who has been nursed back to life, reapparesques Liberty, and saves the republic. Then comes, after making Chauncey Depew President.

Sullivan last night saw the book, which is entitled The Louisiana Journal, and was very much pleased with it. He said he seemed to tickle his fancy that he should be President, with Ignatius Donnelly, Bellamy, and others, and Henry George on his staff, but he remarked that "the wheels in their heads" and he wouldn't have them for advisers. Chauncey Depew he thought might be a good President, but he kept the foreigners out of the country, especially the English. He thought it would be better to give the farmers $100,000,000 than expand the money power as he did. He seemed to think his being elected to Congress was not very ridiculous, and commented that "it's a good place to be, even though done once" on the dead level."
